

ABSTRACT

A method and device are disclosed for controlling the thickness of a coating applied to a substrate by an immersion coating operation wherein the viscosity of the coating solution is sensed and adjustments to the differential rate between the pull rate
5 of the substrate and the upward flow rate of the coating solution are implemented during a dipping cycle.